Why Swil Arts

Swil Arts is a San Diego–based art and illustration studio led by artist Sara and her partner Valentina. The studio creates hand-drawn watercolor works inspired by everyday life and culture in Southern California, transforming familiar scenes into lasting, place-rooted pieces.

Sara spent more than a decade in software engineering, most recently at Google, before transitioning to creative work full time. That shift shaped the foundation of Swil Arts: a practice centered on intentional slowness, close observation, and honoring the small moments most people move past.

Swil Arts creates hand-illustrated artwork that becomes thoughtfully produced, place rooted goods. The studio works with boutiques, gift stores, museum shops, and hospitality spaces seeking distinctive goods that reflect local character and offer meaningful keepsakes.

Swil Arts also provides custom artwork for individuals and brands. Individual commissions often include illustrated homes, wedding venues, and milestone moments. For brands, the studio develops place-based illustrations for packaging, seasonal campaigns, editorial features, hospitality spaces, and collaborative retail collections.

Swil Arts operates as a women-owned and LGBTQ-owned business grounded in responsible production and community care. The studio partners with local print providers, uses paper sourced from responsibly managed forests, packages orders in biodegradable materials, and donates a portion of sales to organizations supporting women, LGBTQ communities, and environmental initiatives.

Swil Arts approaches both art and collaboration with the belief that beauty carries greater weight when created with care, integrity, and a strong sense of place.

About the Artist

SARA WILCZYNSKA

Sara Wilczynska is a San Diego-based watercolor artist and illustrator. After over a decade in software engineering—most recently at Google—she transitioned from Big Tech to full-time creative work, founding Swil Arts, a studio devoted to painting the moments we might otherwise miss. Her work captures lingering memories in watercolor: small, soulful pauses you can hold on to.

Sara blends expressive ink lines with fluid washes, painting architecture, flora, and the kinds of things people overlook until they're made visible through art. Her pieces are infused with California ease, slow-made, eco-conscious, and created to last—crafted not just to be seen, but kept, gifted, returned to.

Since launching Swil Arts, Sara has collaborated with retail and hospitality brands on art for merchandise and custom products, including commissioned work for La Valencia Hotel in San Diego, as well as original artwork for on-site display. Her collections include original paintings fine art prints, and thoughtfully designed stationery and home décor featuring her artwork. These are available through her online shop and through a growing number of retail spaces across Southern California.

A former yoga teacher and software engineer, Sara brings an intentional, grounded approach to creativity. Through her art, she invites people to slow down, smile, and rediscover the meaningful in the mundane.
